The environment

The weather at this time of the year is particularly pleasant at the seaside. The sun shines generously on the wide beach of Vama Veche, and the water temperature is above  $20^{\circ}$  C, inviting to swimming parties. Besides, the Black Sea shore landscape is delightful, with large orchards and vineyards. Mangalia, the nearest town, whose ancient name is Callatis, boasts remarkable remnants, starting with the period of the Hellenic colonization of the 6th century BC and continuing with those of the Roman, Byzantine and Ottoman rules.

INTRODUCTION

The Luxembourg Institute for European and International Studies is a forum of intellectual discussions and research as well as a platform of training for undergraduates and young professionals from both western and eastern countries.

One of the Institute's constant themes of research and debate has been the European integration viewed as a particularly dynamic and challenging process. The topic has been explored for the last 10 years under the form of summer schools organized by the Institute in cooperation with the Black Sea University Foundation and later on with the European Cultural Centre, Bucharest at Mangalia, Romania.

The 2004 seminar is an attempt to anticipate further developments and find solutions for the problems which may be encountered in the ongoing process of European enlargement.

"According to the EU planning, 2007 will be the year of the next major enlargement of the Union. Romania and Bulgaria, but perhaps also a country such as Croatia are to join. Of course many things could still happen in the years leading to possible membership: the present extension from 15 to 25 countries might encounter unforeseen obstacles and difficulties; disputes, quarrels and recriminations might set in in the wake of that enlargement; the development, particularly the economic and social one of Bulgaria and Romania, might be less encouraging than envisaged; the European Union might be in a state of political and institutional disarray; something might go utterly wrong in the pan-European or in the global dimension (for example an acute deterioration of the relations with Russia); a global economic crisis or some major political disruption in the international system might occur; some of the EU countries might be tempted to shut the door and choose a policy of consolidation before further widening; the candidate countries themselves may experience a period of societal crisis." (Dr. Armand Clesse)
