Albanian speaker of Parliament meets Bundestag President Lammert during his visit to Germany -GazetaShqip, (Albania), 3 December 2013

Albanian speaker of the Assembly Ilir Meta, during an official visit in Germany, met with the President of the Bundestag, Norbert Lammert. They discussed about the relations between the two countries, Albania's progress in terms of European integration and the developments in the region. Meta said that the approval of Albania's candidacy would be a positive message not only for Albanians, but for the entire European perspective of the Western Balkans. Lammert praised the 23 June elections and said he was convinced Albania belonged to Europe. He said a clear perspective for the country was needed. Meta stressed that Albania counted on Germany's support, adding that the consensual adoption of the European Integration Resolution by the Albanian Assembly last week demonstrated the unified stand of political parties in terms of integration. They also agreed to intensify the relations between the two parliaments in the future.

Iranian Ambassador to Albania: Time to increase trade exchanges between two countries –Balkan Web, (Albania), 3 December 2013

The Iranian Ambassador to Albania, Abdolmajid Mozaffari, in an interview with GazetaShqiptare on Sunday, 1 December, said that the Islamic Republic of Iran believe they should maintain and strengthen the relations with all peoples, including Albania. According to him, although Albania and Iran are located in two different regions and pursue different priorities in their foreign policy, bilateral relations should not be ignored. Mozaffari said that the level of trade exchange between the two countries has been low. He said that both countries, as developing economies, need investments and infrastructural projects. According to him, Iranian investors could be present in various economic sectors. Co-operation between the two countries has the potential of being more intensive and more steps should be undertaken to promote the development of trade exchanges.

Russian Ambassador to Albania: Full potential of Albanian-Russian relations has not been used yet – GazetaShqiptare, (Albania), 4 December 2013

In an interview with GazetaShqiptare on 1 December 2013, Russian Ambassador in Albania Leonid Abramov said that Albania's decision to not accept the import of the Syrian chemical weapons was a sign of political maturity. He said that the civil peaceful protests which preceded the decision were also a sign of maturity. Abramov said that Albania was the only country left at the moment of decision-making. He said he personally welcomed the decision. With regards to the bilateral relations between Albania and Russia, Abramov said that the full potential has not been used yet. According to him, although Russia has been included in the list of top ten trade partners of Albania during the last ten years, there are in fact no joint investment projects. He said Russia is specialized on energy, but co-operation could also be extended to transportation and infrastructure sectors. Abramov said that although Russian investors are interested in Albania, the opportunities to resolve disputes in the shortest time possible in a warm and favourable climate are also necessary. With regards to the Friendship Treaty signed between the respective foreign ministers in 2004, but not signed by the respective Presidents yet, Abramov said that the delay was due to the government changes in both countries. He said Russia's stand regarding the Kosovo independence should not affect the relations between Russia and Albania.

Croatians Vote in Favor of Banning Same-Sex Marriage – *(Time World), Croatia, 2 December 2013

Initial poll results on 1 December 2013 showed Croatia has backed amendments to its constitution that would ban same-sex marriage and strictly define the union along traditional lines. Almost 65% of voters agreed to defining marriage as a "matrimony between a man and a woman," according to the partial results from about one-third of polling stations that were released by the electoral commission. Liberal groups opposed, saying it infringes on basic human rights, and both the government and public figures spoke out against the referendum. Croatian President Ivo Josipovic planned to vote against amending the constitution: "We don't need this kind of a referendum," he said. "Defining marriage between a man and a woman doesn't belong to the constitution. A nation is judged by its attitude toward minorities." But groups backed by the Catholic Church garnered 750,000 signatures in support of the measure. The vote, a major victory for Croatia's conservatives, has divided the newest E.U. nation. About 90% of its 4.4 million people are Roman Catholic. Still, experts say the country's attitude toward gay rights has shifted gradually since the first pride parade was held in Zagreb in 2002.

Prime Minister Rama promises support to Italian entrepreneurs –Balkans Web (Albania), 5 December 2013

Albanian Prime Minister Edi Rama met with some representatives of the Italian business community in Tirana. Rama said the Albanian government is committed to create a favourable climate for Italian investments in the country and that they are working to make Albania the first choice for all Italian entrepreneurs who want to invest abroad. According to Rama, a working group of MPs has been established to work on promoting Albania in Italy. He added that although big industries are welcome, the focus of the government is on small and medium enterprises because they are faster, simpler and more feasible. Rama invited the entrepreneurs to inform him about the issues they have faced during the past years. According to Rama, Albania could benefit from the current not-so-positive situation of manufacturing in Italy, as it offers more favourable conditions and advantages for the entrepreneurs.
